Our Mission

To educate youth with the intent to prevent the onset of drug addiction and to support recovering addicts in their pursuit of sobriety. In collaboration with schools and communities, The S.L.A.T.E project will provide informative presentations that open one's eyes to the struggles of drug addiction that our youth and young adults are combating in our own backyards. The unique perspective of recovering addicts serves to support the choice of sober living and to strengthen one's desire to improve social and emotional well-being.

Our Goals

- Youth Education
- Community Education
- Crisis Support and Counseling
- Established Sober Housing

ABOUT THE S.L.A.T.E. PROJECT

Saving Lives From Addiction Through Treatment & Education

The S.L.A.T.E. Project is a non-profit organization geared towards educating the youth with an informative and educational view on alcohol and substance abuse. Steven Dodge's unique, yet identifiable, outlook on what its like to be high school student and his college experience being stuck in addiction is compelling and inspirational.

Steven speaks in a detailed and easy to understand way that captures the lives of those who are in the audience, about his struggles with alcohol and substance abuse, where drugs and alcohol took him, and how he was able to overcome from that way of life. His experience, strength, and hope shed light on the common struggles of a teenager as well as the road to and from addiction. Steven is not a cop, a person of authority, or an official. He is simply a fellow young person who kids can see themselves in.

To us, identification is the most important factor contributing to prevention and early intervention. He will begin with his early life discussing the common feelings and emotions of a typical young person. Then explaining the progression of his addiction explaining the damage he did to himself and others along the way, until he was to the point of being broken and reaching out for help. Most importantly, he speaks about the options and resources for help getting sober as well as what his life is like today being sober for over two years. We believe this form of prevention is key to stop the onset of substance abuse and addiction. When you speak from the mind you reach a person's mind. When you speak from the heart you reach a person's heart. But when you speak from personal life experience you have the ability to inspire and change lives! Join us on this altruistic movement and play your part in eradicating this epidemic that is sweeping through our country.
